Of Special Interest This Week

+ A member of Vice President Bush's staff requested FBIS to provide him with a brief analysis of a recent Pravda article criticizing the Vice President for comments he had made about the Soviet role in Middle East peace efforts. The analysis, characterizing overall Soviet commentary on the Middle East and describing the background of the author, was provided and passed to the Vice President along with a copy of the Pravda article to aid him in assessing the article's significance. + Responding to high-level consumer interest, the FBIS London Bureau expedited handling of Mu'ammarr al-Qadhdhafi's televised speech delivered on the occasion of the Great 1 September Revolution anniversary. A satellite feed of the 3-hour address was arranged through Visnews London, allowing analysts to view the videotapes the next day. (U/AIUO)

+ On 2 September, FBIS used the Langley satellite dish to intercept a relay of recorded excerpts from the Moscow press conference on arms control transmitted over the Gorizont satellite. The excerpts, which included answers from the Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman to questions from Western reporters about the detention of U.S. News and World Report correspondent Nicholas Daniloff, were fed to Headquarters consumers over the Langley TV grid.
